Young Ladies, Go West.

Many thousands of men and women spend their lives in single blessedness, and all because of the unequal distribution of population. The East abounds with a surplusage of women, and the West is unfortunate enough to have an excess of men.

Could these things be equalized, there would be many more smiling homes in the land, and fewer old bachelors and old maids. The enumeration of population shows that the marrying-outlook for single women in the East is rather a discouraging character. There are not husbands enough to go around, and thousands of women well calculated to create sunshine

in homes of their own will probably live

and die without an opportunity to marry.

All the New England States have a large excess of females, Massachusetts standing at the head with 66,000 surplus. New York has 71,000 more females than males,

New Jersey 12,000, Pennsylvania 10,000,

Maryland about the same number, while most of the Southern States have entirely too many representatives of the gentler sex.

On the other hand the preponderance of males in the Western States and Territories is proportionately large. Illinois has an excess of 96,000, Indiana 43,000,

Michigan 88,000, Iowa 42,000, Wisconsin

45,000, Minnesota 58,000, Colorado 41,

000, Nevada 22,000 and Nebraska 46,000.

Wyoming Territory has 14,000 men and only 6,000 women; Idaho has 28,000 men and only 10,000 women; Montana has 38,000 of the former and only 10,000 of the latter, while the surplus of men in Arizona amounts to 16,000. Missouri has a surplus of 86,000 males, while on the Pacific coast

California has a surplus of 162,000, Oregon

22,000, and Washington Territory 17,000.

Taken altogether there are about 1,000,000

more men in the United States than women.

Many a man who is bravely

struggling for success in the newer country

would get on far better if cheered and encouraged by a faithful and pains-taking wife. And it is no discredit to the gentler sex to say that thousands of them would be the happier if they had the sturdy arm

of a devoted husband to lean upon, and much better off if they had pleasant home of their own. The refining influence of woman is needed in the newer States of the West and in the Territories, but how it is to be brought about is a question which time only can solve.—(Cleveland Leader.)

Fair Rules.

As many who attend agricultural fairs

are ignorant of the rules that govern such exhibitions, a practical agricultural man

has made up the following code of rules

that are applicable to fairs at all times and in all sections. As the season of fairs is upon us, it is only fair that those attending fairs should properly heed them:

Don't crawl in over the fence, but through the gate. The fence is simply made for ornament.

Keep to the right as you pass around.

If you don't, you may get left.

If you observe any animal that strikes

your particular fancy, go buy it at once.

In passing around among the live stock,

remember that the horses and cattle are well heeled.

Beware of pickpockets! In order not to put them to unnecessary trouble, carry

your wallet in your hands.

In case you get lost hire some one to find you. Twelve cheap boys will be stationed on the ground for this purpose.

In walking round you will find plenty of chances to get a square meal.

The Manufacture of Salt in the United States.

The preliminary report of Special Agent W. L. Rowland on the salt industry of the United States shows that the salt product has increased from 12,

717,198 bushels in 1869 to 29,800,298 bushels in 1880. Of this yield of salt 888,908 bushels came from sea or bay water by solar evaporation, and 944,158 bushels

from inland lakes or natural deposits by the same process. The amounts produced by artificial heat from subterranean brines

were 8,853,821 bushels by kettle or pan

process, and 16,115,551 bushels by steam evaporation process. Fifteen States and Territories have salt works, namely: California, Florida, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nevada,

New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Texas,

Utah, Virginia and West Virginia. Michigan leads with 12,425,885 bushels; New York produced 8,748,203 bushels; West

Virginia, 2,679,438; Ohio, 2,650,301; California, 884,443; Pennsylvania, 851,450;

Utah, 483,800; Virginia, 425,895; Louisiana, 312,000; Nevada, 182,408. The other States named produced only small amounts.

The total value of the salt product of the United States during the census year was $4,817,636. In California, Florida and Massachusetts salt is made from sea water;

in Louisiana rock salt is mined and ground.

The salt industry employed capital to the amount of $8,225,740, and over 5,000 hands whose wages amounted to $1,256,113. The wells number 539. The deepest wells are in West Virginia, where they average

1,043 feet. The Ohio wells average 902

feet; Pennsylvania, 884 feet; Michigan,

681 feet; Kentucky, 569 feet; New York,

324 feet; Virginia, 262 feet. The rest are shallow.

FARMING ON SHARES.—Gabe Snodgrass

owns a farm near Austin, and Jim

Webster asked Gabe the other day what he was doing with his farm this year. "I have rented it on the shares to Sam Johnson."

He gets a half dollar out every dollar he makes out of the farm. But how does yer know he gibs yer de kernet amount of what he makes? He kin keep back some and you will neber know it." "Dar ain't no danger ob dat. Don't you see the morn-dollar he brings to me de more half dollar he gets? You bet he ain't gwine ter keep back none. He ain't no fool. He wouldn't get no half dollars out of de dollar he would keep back." "A Southern negro, an ex-slave, hired a field from his old master to cultivate, he to receive one-third and the master two-thirds of the crop. The old negro was honest, but not up in arithmetic. The field yielded two loads, both of which he put in his master's crib, and reported to the astonished landlord, "Dar is no third, sah; de land an too poor to produce de third, sah."

Recently it seems as though a large number of people throughout this country

have nothing to do but write postal cards

to newspaper publishers, asking for a sample copy of their paper. Perhaps these people think we are publishing a paper

just to wear out our young life, but that is where they fall into a common error. We are trying to acquire a competence, so that we can carry a Summer cane and have a special mug at the barber shop with our monogram on it, and that is why we ask pay for things sometimes when it seems unhappy and eccentric. People who include stamps will be waited upon just as little, but those who include a chunk of tobacco in a postal card and look for this

Quill Pens.

An advertisement in a morning paper

for an experienced quill pen cutter called for an interview with the only quill pen

importer and manufacturer in this city.

He said that twenty years ago there were several quill pen makers here and in other cities. Now one in Philadelphia and in other cities are all that he knows. Quill pens

are used mainly by old lawyers and judges,

partly from custom, but chiefly because they are easy to write with. Most of the quills come from Russia. The Russian goose has a harder quill than our geese.

An unclarified quill from the wing of a Russian goose is the most durable. The German quills have the best plumage. A two-down box of good quills will last two or three months easily for a man who knows how to pen his own pens. The instrument

used in pen making is the ordinary blade

of the penknife, inserted firmly into a wooden handle of peculiar shape tapering

to a point. A pen is made with two cuts or three. The blunt end of the quill is first cut off, because it is not tough. Then the point of the handle is inserted, and the quill is carefully split for a certain distance. Two slashing cuts then form the rib, and the pen is done. The plumage is neatly trimmed. Swan quills are sometimes used for pens, but are very much more expensive than the common goose quill. Quill pens are sold at retail for about three shillings a dozen. The demand is steady, such as it is, but it is growing less

year by year.

The Dead President.

The assassin's bullet has at last done its work and an immediate, lifeless body is all that is left of James A. Garfield, the man who in every walk of life demonstrated that he was made in the likeness of his God. Born of humble parents, in a little hovel in Northern Ohio, his first efforts at obtaining a livelihood for himself and obtaining a livelihood for his family when he was two years of age, was by driving a mule on the tow-path of the Ohio and Pennsylvania canal. But the yearning of an undeveloped though vigorous intellect caused him to look up higher, and by dint of great self-denial and exertion he was able to obtain sufficient preparation to enter Hiram College. Hard and diligent study enabled him in a few years to graduate, and subsequently to secure the Presidency of the institution he had so lately entered a poor, struggling boy. Next we see him elevated by his neighbors and friends to the Ohio Legislature, subsequently as a distinguished officer in the army, an honored member of the Lower House of Congress for eighteen years, elected to the U. S. Senate, and then to the Presidency—all before he had turned the fiftieth mile-post in the journey of life. Entering the Presidency, he takes a bold stand upon the eternal principles of the Constitution, and his every action showed his intention of administering the affairs of Government so as to redound to the welfare of the whole people. The country is at peace at home and abroad, and a general feeling of good-will is pervading every action, when, without cause or excuse, he is made the target of a vile assassin, and the great and good man falls fatally wounded. The whole land is shocked, and execrations fall on the despicable wretch who slew a friend and political ally.

For nearly eighty days the President wavers between life and death, suffering untold agony, yet murmuring not, till death relieves him and allows his noble spirit to soar to its reward. The people had somewhat prepared for the inevitable, but their sorrow is no less keen nor their indignation less intense than if the cowardly shot had produced immediate fatal results. They mourn with the faithful and devoted wife and sympathize with that old mother, who has been spared to see her loved and dutiful son taken away in the zenith of his glory. Regrets, deep and lasting, circle around his bier to-day, and a nation, without regard to political or sectional feelings, unite in tears over the death of their President.

It is a sad, a mournful day, but, as the beloved President himself said to the excited, maddened mob that gathered in New York after the assassination of President Lincoln, "God reigns, and the Government at Washington still lives." A severe blow has been made at our Republican form of Government, but there will be no interruption of its affairs. Arthur was sworn in as President almost before the icy fingers of death had settled over the body of Garfield, and there will be no interregnum, as in the cases of murdered Kings and other potentates. Let the new President learn of his predecessor, and so shape his administration as to carry out the great reforms which have been started.

Monday the body of James A. Garfield will be laid in its last resting-place, wet with the tears of a sorrowing nation. The mortal part will be hid from view, but his memory will remain and his example stand out in bold relief for emulation for all time to come. Truly he was one of nature's noblemen—a man born to be honored and respected, and his name will go down to history, scarcely less revered than that of the immortal Washington.

The Council of Frankfort attempted to play a grab game on Forepaugh's Circus by raising the license from $55 to $70, but Forepaugh got a head of them by securing grounds just outside of the city limits on which to raise his tent. Then the Council laid their heads together, and after great effort, passed an ordinance prohibiting the circus from unloading on the streets, well knowing that it was a matter of impossibility to unload so long a train on the depot grounds. Upon receipt of this injunction, which was served on Mayor Taylor, restraining him from executing the ordinance, Taylor refused to obey the order, and with his police attempted to prevent the unloading. The Sheriff, finding himself powerless, called on the Governor for aid, and in a very short space of time the McCree Guards were armed and ready for duty. They were marched to the depot, where they found the Mayor, with drawn pistol, swearing that he would shoot the first man who attempted to take a wagon from the train. Still refusing to obey the injunction, the soldiers marched up and seized him, took him from the scene by force. The unloading then proceeded, but it was after six o'clock when the procession began to move through the streets.

The afternoon performance was, of course, row and Forepaugh threatens a suit for heavy damages against the city. The action of the Mayor was jacobinical in the extreme, and might have led to the loss of many lives. He is now under arrest for carrying concealed weapons, and if the law is not strictly enforced upon him then it is about time it was repealed. The people of Frankfort now see their error in electing such an individual to so responsible an office, and we hope it will teach them a lesson.

DEAD!

OUR BELOVED PRESIDENT CROSSES THE DARK RIVER.

"The President is dead," were the sad words whispered by the telegraph on Tuesday morning, and notwithstanding the fact that the news of the previous day had almost fore-shadowed such a result, our people were loth to believe it, and hoped almost against hope that there was some mistake. In a short time, however, the following telegram, which was issued in the form of an EXTRA, buried the last ray of hope by confirming the fearful news:

(Special Despatch to The Interior Journal.)

President Garfield died at 10:25 last night. Previous to his demise evidence had been noticed indicating a quiet night. The members of the Cabinet had gone to their cottages, and the Doctors were not by his bedside, the only persons there being Col. Swain and Rockwell. Dr. Bliss left the President at 10 o'clock, the latter then dropping off to sleep. At 10:15 the President awoke and complained of a severe pain near his heart. Dr. Bliss being called stated the end was near, and summoned Mrs. and Miss Garfield. The President was almost without pulse and the beating of his heart scarcely distinguishable. His last words referred to the pain he felt, but a while before 10 o'clock his mind wandering carried him back to happy scenes at Mentor; his aged mother and boyhood scenes of pleasure being the subjects of his dreams.

A reporter of the Sun gave the news first to Vice-President Arthur, in New York. Gen. Arthur could hardly believe it. A few minutes later a cab rolled up, and he was handed a message from the Cabinet announcing the death. He buried his head in his hands and wept silently.

Later Gen. Arthur was sworn in as President of the United States by Judges, Erastus D. and Donohue, of the Supreme Court of New York—the ceremony transpiring in the parlors of his residence on Lexington Avenue.

It is thought, according to reports to the Louisville Post, that the funeral will occur at Cleveland. E. F. MADDEN. This dispatch tells in a few words the whole story, which is embellished and enlarged to column upon column in the daily papers. Those of our readers who do not get a paper every day will be especially surprised that death should follow so quickly after our rosiest report of last week, and for their benefit we will say that on Friday the President was taken a great deal worse. He was seized with rigors which would almost stiffen him, and which would go off leaving him in no such state as it was soon known that his attenuated frame could not long survive such attacks. The morning of the day that he died he showed no signs, however, of immediate dissolution. He chatted with his little daughter and seemed to be especially pleased when she told him that he was looking so much better. In fact, up to the time that Dr. Bliss left him (10 o'clock) he did not appear to be so near death. An autopsy was held which showed that the ball, after fracturing the right eleventh rib, had passed through the spinal column, in front of the spinal canal, fracturing the body of the first lumbar vertebra, driving a number of small fragments of bone into the adjacent soft parts, and lodging just below the pons, about two inches and a half to the left of the spine and behind the peritoneum, where it had become completely encysted. The immediate cause of death was secondary hemorrhage from one of the mesenteric arteries adjoining the track of the ball, the blood rupturing the peritoneum and nearly a pint escaping into the abdominal cavity. . . . The lungs contained no abscess, and the heart no clots. The liver was enlarged and fatty, but free from abscesses. Nor was any found in any other organ, except the left kidney, which contained near its surface a small abscess about one third of an inch in diameter.

On Wednesday morning the President's remains were taken to Washington by special train and placed in the rotunda of the Capitol, where they will lie in state till this evening. At 3 P. M. funeral services will be held in the rotunda, to be conducted by the Rev. Mr. Power, of the church of which the late President was a member. At 5 o'clock the body will be taken to Cleveland by special train. It is expected the train will reach Cleveland at 2 o'clock on Saturday. When the body reaches Cleveland it will be turned over to the municipal authorities of the State of Ohio from Saturday until Monday, when their final interment will take place in Lawnfield Cemetery.

The following touching description of the President's last moments is from a New York Telegram extra: At the President's bedside, holding his poor emaciated hand in her own, and watching with anguish unutterable the fast vanishing sands of life, the faithful, devoted wife, during the closing hours of the President's career, and physicians lamenting their powerlessness in the presence of the dark angel of death. Toward the last the mind of the sufferer wandered. He was once more back in Mentor amid those scenes where the happiest hours of his life were spent. He sat in the dear old homestead again, with his loved ones around him; his aged mother, so proud of her big boy, his faithful wife, his beloved children. It was a blissful dream that robbed death of its terrors, and rendered the dying man for the moment unconscious of the cruel rending of his once vigorous frame that was constantly going on. The moon of the restless ocean mingled with the sob of his loved ones, as the lamp of life went out forever. Nearly every one around the President clung to hope to the last, and refused to credit the approach of death until the shadow deepened and the destroyer's presence could be no longer unfelt. Flags half at half-mast from every house on Ocean avenue, and the gayety of this favorite watering place is followed by the deepest gloom. The struggle is over, and death is victor.

SOME impetuous editor suggests that on account of the drought, which did so much damage, the next Legislature should pass a day law. Such suggestions are extremely silly; God knows the laws as they stand give protection enough to the debtor class, and make the collection of an honest debt exceedingly hard.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY CORNHILL has dismissed the Grand Jury till October 3d, and for his action is being severely criticized. Considering that the Star Route cases were awaiting consideration, it does look like a false-feeling makes him wish to give the racials all the benefits of the law's delay.

THE man whom Conkling forced upon the Chicago Convention as nominee for Vice-President, to spite it for refusing to nominate Grant for a third term, is now President of the United States. He is the same man whom his Fraudulency, R. R. Hayes, discharged from the Collectorship of the Custom House at New York on the 31st of January, 1879, with these parting words: "You have made the Custom House a centre of political mismanagement, and with a deep sense of my obligations under the Constitution, I regard it as my plain duty to suspend you in order that the office may be honestly administered." This introduction to the public, coupled with his disgraceful machinations against the President prior to his wounding, and his worship of Conkling, does not fore-shadow a pure and faithful administration, nor does it inspire the country with the belief that he will be able to rise above his level of a spoils politician, to a President of the whole people. His behavior, however, since the fatal 23d of July has been marked with a dignity becoming the high position to which he was elected, and in keeping with the embarrassing condition in which he was placed. The manner in which he received the news of the death of the President, if true, shows that he is a truer man than he has had credit for, and we hope that with the experience he has had in the last two months, he has learned broader views than he has heretofore displayed, and that the public manifestations of approval that followed Garfield's short but brilliant administration, may cause him to emulate his example and follow in his footsteps. To this end he should be given a fair consideration by all parties, and an earnest support till he proves himself unworthy of confidence and respect.

THE death of President Garfield and the accession of Arthur to the Presidency, leaves the country now with but one step to anarchy. Contrary to all precedent, Arthur refused, during the closing hours of the Senate, to vacate the chair in order that a President pro tem of the body might be chosen. There is no Speaker of the House, his term having expired on the 4th of March, and should Arthur be taken off before the meeting of Congress, there would be no head to the Government, and no one authorized to call an extra session of that body. In the 106 years of our form of Government such a complication of affairs has not previously existed, and it seems that the founders of the Constitution did not contemplate that it ever would exist, as they made no provision for it. The proper thing for Arthur to do would be to call that body in extra session, so that a President of the Senate could be elected, who would have a legal right to assume the duties of Chief Executive in case another Guitau should turn up for Arthur's benefit.

A FEW years ago ex-Senator Dorsey was comparatively a poor man. He lived on his salary, and was considered honest as the main chance, as subsequent developments showed, and when he saw that chance was in on the Star-route, and soon became immensely rich by robbing the Government. It is now said that his cattle ranch in New Mexico consists of five hundred thousand acres, much of which is under fence, the whole valued at $1,000,000. The property is stocked with thirty-one thousand head of cattle, among which are five hundred bulls that cost $500 each, and a herd of twelve hundred horses. It is more than likely, now that Arthur has become President, that he will be allowed to enjoy his stolen gains, for of Arthur's sort there is many a Star-router, and a following makes us wondrous kind.

THE Democratic State Executive Committee has fixed Frankfort as the place, and January 11th, 1882, as the day to hold a State Convention to nominate a candidate for Clerk of the Court of Appeals. The ratio of representation was fixed at one delegate for every 200 votes cast for Hancock and English, and one for every fraction of one hundred votes and over. The delegates are to be chosen in every county on the same day, and December 5th was fixed as that upon which they shall be chosen. The Committee took occasion to recommend that the practice of holding conventions and primary elections to nominate candidates for county officers a year prior to the election be discontinued, and to condemn the holding of primary elections on the same day with State and county elections, as deleterious and demoralizing to party organization and discipline.

AS SOUL, as dastardly and as execrable as was the shot of the doubly-damned brute that killed the President, the shot of the officer sent to guard the assassin was even more cowardly and reprehensible. The attempt to take his life, while a prisoner, although he deserved a death more miserable than was ever visited on the vilest cur, was in keeping with the act of Guitau, yet wanting in the nerve necessary to act, when the chances were that the outraged people would visit him with a vengeance on his cowardly act. Guitau could hope for no reward; Mason expected to be hanged for his cowardly act. Guitau should be burned at the stake and Mason roasted alive.

DR. LUGENBERG, a brother of Mrs. Christianity, the ex-Treasurer girl, has become so enraged at the charges made by the old Senator against her, that he can no longer contain himself. Failing to obtain a personal interview with Christianity, he has sent him a challenge to mortal combat, which, of course, he refused. The Doctor knew this beforehand, and it is rather cheap notoriety he has brought himself into.

A NUMBER of papers turned their column rules in their issues announcing the death of the President. We had hoped such foolishness had been buried with the dead past. It is an affection of sorrow about in keeping with the other mania of mourning, all of which it would be best to drop.

TWO Virginians, Gen. Peyton Wise and U. S. District Attorney Lewis resorted to the code, he dined, sir! this week and met on the field of honor near Warrenton. Lewis fired first, without effect, and then Wise shot his weapon in the air. Their differences were then amicably adjusted.

IN Chicago when a man wishes to call another a liar he speaks of him as an "official bulletin." A close reader of the late official bulletins issued by the physicians attending the President, will see at once that the terms have become synonymous.

It is said that Arthur will call a special session of the Senate at once, and it is also rumored that he will retain Garfield's Cabinet. Better rumors say that Elkins will have to go, and that Grant's old Premier, Hamilton Fish, will succeed him.

—MR. TAYLOR, who left for Governor Bishop, of Ohio, took "Sage Campbell" for the party when he arrived at R. K. HOFFMAN's. Well, come to think of it, "Sage" is a little of a fool.

—MR. MAX LUCAS will leave for Louisville today to open a purchasing agency, where ladies and others outside the city can send for any article they wish, with the assurance that satisfaction will be guaranteed in every instance. Miss Mary is particularly adapted for the work, and we hope she will be liberally patronized. For further particulars see advertisement.

LOCAL MATTERS.

New Fall Calico at McAllister & Lytle's. WINDOW SHADES ready for use at W. H. Higgins.
CALL and see Hale & Nunnally's new Wheat Drill.
CALL and see the new stock of Fancy Chairs at R. H. Wearen's.

HIGHEST market price paid for all kinds of country produce. McAllister & Lytle's. SIDE SADDLE, good as new, for sale. Apply to Miss Rose Richards, at St. Asaph Hotel.

HALE & NUNNELLEY have taken the agency for the celebrated Davis Sewing Machine.
We have received our Fall stock of Ladies', Misses' and Children's Fine Shoes. McAllister & Lytle.

HUNTSVILLE is much of a circus town. Cooper & Jackson only got a little over $300 for two performances.
LITTLE PERSONAL.—To the wife of Mr. J. E. Parris a 99 pound girl, and to Mrs. Walker Bell, a boy—Hawkins Brown.

DON'T fail to see the stock of heating stoves, grates, coal hods, etc., at W. H. Higgins, before purchasing elsewhere.
YESTERDAY was the anniversary of President Lincoln's emancipation proclamation. The colored population here did not seem to know it, or at least they did not "let on."

The body of Wm. Huffman, son of Granville Huffman, of this county, which was stabbed to death in a row in Pat Barry's barrooms, in Tennessee, was brought home for burial.

It is hardly necessary to call the reader's attention to the advertisement of McAllister & Lytle. The junior member of the firm, Mr. R. S. Lytle, with his well-known taste, purchased, while in the city, everything that the most fastidious lady could desire. If you don't believe it go and see.

NEVER SOLD.—Ed Johnson, declared a vagrant by the Court, was sold by Sheriff Menefee, on Saturday afternoon, for the period of six months. The first bid was $1, from which it slowly crept up to $18.25, and at this figure he was knocked off to James P. Bailey. This is a tremendous fall in negroes. A little over a score of years ago Ed would have brought $1,000 and been considered cheap.

COLLISION.—A stock train ran into a freight engine standing at the Junction the other day, but no damage was done further than the smashing up of two cowcatchers. Adolphus Underwood, engineer of the moving train, was suspended from duty for thirty days, during which he can cogitate upon the impossibility of two bodies occupying the same space at the same time.

In a few moments after the reception of the sad news from Long Branch the Post Office was draped in mourning, and that night the gate of nearly every private house in town was hung with the same sable habiliments. It is not known who did the latter, but it is supposed that it was the same man who chalked 229 all over town last Fall, and now wishes in some manner to atone for his silly work.

HALE & NUNNELLEY want all kinds of Produce.

CARLOAD Webster Wagons received last evening by Geo. D. Wearen.

Box lot of Bonanza Mill Flour just received by Hale & Nunnally.

A LARGE lot of choice Family Flour on hand at McAllister & Lytle's.

CASH-IN-ADVANCE is our business motto now. Delinquents must come to time.

LACING Kid Gloves, in black and Fall shades, received this week. McAllister & Lytle.

TO THE FARMERS.—You can get the Oliver Chilled Plow at W. H. Higgins for $10 and $10.50.

WANTED—10,000 pounds of Country Sides, Hams and Shoulders. Highest cash price paid for them. McAllister & Lytle.

BRUCE & Co. are just crowded with new goods. Go and relieve them of some of them, so that they can get room to turn around.

Those who know themselves indebted to Hale & Nunnally up to the 1st of July had better come forward and settle, if not they will find their accounts in the hands of an officer.

AN undertaker's business is a very unpleasant one, and some of my unfortunate patrons seem to forget the most important part of the business to me; which makes it the more unpleasant. Do they understand it?

R. H. Wearen.
TUCKER.—John S. Tucker, called to distinguish him, Little John, died Wednesday of Consumption, and was buried at Hall's Gap. He was a son of James Tucker, who was killed by Jim Bridge-water, a number of years ago.

The signs of the times suggests that it will more than ever be necessary to spend your money where you can get the best goods for the lowest amount. It is a settled fact that you can do this at J. W. Hayden's in anything in his line, but especially in Boots and Shoes. His large stock is marked down lower than the lowest.

MR. JOSEPH SEVERANCE, senior member of the firm of Severance, Dudderar & Co., has returned from the markets, where he bought a complete stock of every variety of goods handled by them, together with all the novelties of the season. Full particulars next week, but in the meantime call on them and make a personal inspection. It will be worth your trouble.

ALLEGED MURDERERS.—William and Ev. Messer have been lodged in jail here for safe keeping. They are charged with the murder of two men in Knox county, at the August election of last year. Another brother, also in the row, was sent to the penitentiary for seven years at the last term of the Knox Court, but the two above mentioned succeeded in getting a continuance.

The styles in Ladies Dress Goods seem to grow more beautiful with each succeeding season, and what is equally surprising they do not increase in price. The new supply of Roman Plaid and Stripes at J. W. Hayden's are lovely, and the trimmings, such as Passamenterie, Fringe, Guipure Lace, Buttons, etc., are just too awfully pretty. Don't take our word for it but go and see them.

Every man who desires to be considered the "boss of fashion and the mold of form" goes to J. W. Hayden & Co.'s clothing establishment, corner of Third and Market streets, Louisville, Ky., and buys his clothes. Beyond doubt they are the finest and most conscientious clothiers in Kentucky, and manufacture all the clothes which they sell. Their styles are elegant and they have the most complete assortment of Youth's and Children's Clothing. Call and see them.

THE L. & N. EXTENSION.—The bridge over Rockcastle river will be completed next week, when track-laying will commence, and Capt. McMichael says it shall be pushed through with as great dispatch as possible. Those contractors who are behind will be ordered to step aside and the company will complete their works. Col. Varmon, who has just passed over the line, says that the excavations are progressing satisfactorily, but owing to the scarcity of masons and stonecutters the stone work is behind.

ONE LEGGED JIM HARRIS writes us to say that they were mistaken in saying that a bad feeling had existed for a long time between him and Cain, the man who ran away with his wife. He says that the bad feeling originated about a week before his house was burned, when three of the Cains raised a row with him in his own house. The following Sunday his house was burned while all his family was absent, and he leaves the public to judge who set the fire. He also wishes to correct the statement that he pursued the guilty pair to induce his wife to return. He followed them to get his mare back, which they took with them.

A TALK OF A SHIRT.—The young man referred to in the following, taken from a Rockcastle letter to the Courier-Journal, is supposed to be—but guess: There was one young lady here who perspired very freely. One very warm evening she took a walk up the mountains, hanging on the arm of a young man from Stanford. It was a very warm, the gentleman was allowed to accompany her in his shirt sleeves—along with his other wearing apparel, of course. The lady had on a blue percale dress, and when the couple returned the young man's white shirt looked like it had gone through a blue dyeing house. For several days they kept aloof from the other guests, the fusillade poured at them being almost too hot to stand up against.

AN OUTRAGE.—A few nights since as Prof. O. P. Moore, late Manager, was going from Crab Orchard to the Springs, a couple of cowardly scoundrels sprang out of a stable and seized him, tried to force him into the building. By an almost superhuman effort he broke loose from them and succeeded in getting away. The next day he received a Ku Klux notice to leave the Springs within a certain time or take the consequences. He has a slight suspicion who the guilty parties are, but not sufficient to make their names public. He will, however, with the assistance of the good people of the town, use every effort to find out who his assailants were, and, if successful, will use the law to the fullest extent, and we are sure that he is a penitentiary offense, we warn the perpetrators to make themselves scarce. That any one should wish to harm so gentlemanly a man, is a mystery, unless it be through jealousy of the responsible position that his honorable bearing won for him.

A FIRE.—A little before 6 o'clock last evening, Mrs. Susan Stewart discovered that the house of the editor of this paper was on fire, and immediately gave the alarm. Hundreds of good citizens gathered, and succeeded in subduing the flames and saving the property, and to them our profoundest thanks are hereby returned. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

—Miss Sallie V. Engleman, of Danville, is visiting her grandparents, Mrs. S. E. Engleman. Mr. J. F. Engleman returned home from West, a few days ago, and says that he is satisfied to live in Kentucky for a while.

—Mr. Wm. Norris, a young merchant of Richmond, was in and around Dalton a short time ago prospecting, and he got into business there provided he can form a partnership with a partner in person in that neighborhood. We would advise two young gentlemen of this place, not to disturb the turkey roost next time they go calling. Mr. J. W. Engleman and family have been on his way to relatives in Washington county.

Yvach Orchard.—The intelligence of the death of the President has cast a gloom over our little village.

Died, on the 19th, near Frenchesville, an infant child of Shapleigh and Harriet Elmore.

—Rev. R. R. Noel, of Lancaster, will preach at the Baptist Church here on Sunday and Sunday night next.

—Curtis Egbert, a little son of Mr. Andersonville Egbert, had his hand severely mangled while getting out of a spring wagon last week.

—Senator Harris carries on such an extensive correspondence of late that he is compelled to get a bushel basket in which to carry his letters.

—Mr. Wm. Garritt, of this place, went down to Pink Cottage, a few weeks ago, hoping to be cured of a cancer on his eye. Since his return the cancer has been rapidly healing, and the eye is now perfectly sound.

—The difference between a square foot and a foot square, is agitating the minds of some of our young men. There is quite a difference of opinion existing. Can't some of the readers of THE INTERIOR JOURNAL send them an explanation?

—Joseph Graham, an intelligent son of Dr. C. C. Graham, has returned to his home in Louisville. He has obtained a position in the Laboratory of Prof. Tobin, a renowned chemist of that city.

—Miss Lida Edmonson and Maggie Egbert are visiting relatives here. Dr. E. T. Stappan has gone to New York City to attend the Lectures. Prof. O. P. Moore has engaged Miss Louanna James to take charge of the music class of his school. We should think a good art teacher could get a class here. One is certainly needed.

—The terminus of the long agony at Elberon, the news of which has just reached us, though expected, seems to have shocked all classes.

—Chris Lyon missed the circus—stayed at home and mended and oiled his scales, in order to weigh nicely his high-priced cattle.

—Mrs. W. R. Williams is in Cincinnati, purchasing an entire new stock of Fine Millinery, which she will open in the Hinchey house, in Hustonville.

—Most Venerable and Venerable also Venerable synods are hereby tendered for all our complaints. The present superb specimen of weather is simply charming.

—Provisions.—Corn meal, $1 per bushel; flour, $5 per cwt. Bacon, Sides, 15 cents; ham, 16 cents. Beef, scarce and advanced since late heavy transactions. Whisky, high—but a good many takers.

—Adam W. Carpenter will probably be able to furnish a good article of his particular friends with an extra quality of rye, in small quantities, he having purchased 50 bushels from the Madison man who bought his cattle.

—A good deal of sickness in this section. Among the cases reported are that of a little child of John McAllister, dangerous; Mrs. Ben Givens, reliable; and Mrs. J. Lee, said to be improving; and Mrs. Lucinda Hocker, very low, but hopeful.

—John Blain's antiquarian researches have been richly rewarded. We always believed there was some good in him; but since he has incontestably established his claim to Irish descent, we take him to our arms with all the gushing gladness of true sons of our race. The euphonious titles song the last paragraph.

—There was Miles and Matt and sturdy Pat. And merry Morgan Murphy; O. And Marjough Maags, and Shaggy Stages, McLaughlin and McMurphy, O.

—The mistake of the balloon man consisted in taking aboard so many newspaper reporters. They are a race who cannot survive a distance from police stations and telegraph offices. They find their occupation near the surface of the busy earth, and always feel most comfortable when sure that it is within easy reach of their feet. But leave them here; they have few affinities for a higher life.

LATER.—W. R. Williams states that about 9:30 Tuesday night he saw a large luminous body in the Northern heavens at an elevation of about 60°, egg-shaped, the larger end downwards, descending slowly, passing apparently through the bowl of the Dipper, and disappearing at a horizon. He describes it as being larger, more lurid, and moving more slowly than any meteor he has ever seen, leaving no luminous train, but emitting sparks at intervals from its upper and lower extremities. Several other persons who were with him got a full view of the phenomenon. The most plausible theory is that the balloon went up those newspaper men got high, and hence a conflagration from the escape of gas.

—The report of stock sales sent you last week has been verified. The wheat market, as usual, and most of it weighed, but not removed. It is a ticklish subject to handle just now, so some of our stock men are a little tender, and indisposed for conversation over the affairs of the market. The main points of contention are about these: Some two weeks ago a gentleman representing himself as James C. Tribble, a wealthy farmer of Madison county, called on Mr. W. R. Williams, and stated, as he stated, of buying cattle. I don't know that Mr. C. sold him anything; but, being impressed with the belief that he had met a like farmer, he brought him to the city, and introduced him to his brother, T. L. Carpenter, on Thursday evening. On Friday, T. sold him, as stated last week, a fine lot of cattle, and on Monday he returned him in princely style, and on Tuesday he returned him, over to his brother-in-law, G. C. Lyon, whose stock he examined approvingly, and on Sunday proposed to buy it. Crie says he refused to sell on that day, but on Monday he did sell, but would not weigh until the purchaser should be ready to pay. In the meantime Will Frye Carpenter got into the ring, and fearful of a fluctuation in the market, sold the cattle (it is said) on Sunday. J. W. Allen, having learned the ruling prices, bought a lot of cattle in which he saw a speculation, and introduced them to Mr. Tribble. Jim immediately sold them to Mr. Tribble, who, in turn, sold them to G. C. Lyon, on a check of some $300 to meet an immediate need. Tribble declined this, alleging that he would return home and draw the money to meet all his purchases at once. To this end he borrowed Tim Ward's saddle, which was better than his own, borrowed T. Carpenter's pistol to guard his funds on the road, and departed. The parties here all fallen through. He has at Richmond inquiring as to the whereabouts and financial standing of J. C. T. The answer on both points was unsatisfactory. It is generally understood that the trader here all fallen through. A few episodes connected with the affair are going the rounds. It is said that Elder King, hearing of the advantageous sale of his son-in-law, W. F. C., applied to him to sell his (King's) stock, but on learning that Will F. considered Sunday the lucky day for business, the Elder withdrew. Sad Mr. Tribble was so much pleased with our young friend, T. L. C., that he insisted on taking him home with him, offering, as an inducement, to make him a present of fifty bushels of fine white rye for seed. This was accepted by Mr. C. to use his influence with Mr. C. to propose in return to send her a pair of mocking birds and a big lot of candy.

Mass Meeting.—At a meeting of the citizens of Lincoln, held at the Court house yesterday afternoon, to take action on the death of the President, Col. Thos. W. Varmon was on motion of P. M. McRoberts, made Chairman and A. A. Warren Secretary. Col. Varmon stated the object of the meeting, and took occasion to pay a touching tribute to the martyred President. A committee on resolutions was then appointed.

consisting of Judge M. C. Sawyer, A. A. Warren, John J. McRoberts, D. W. Vandiver and W. P. Walton. They retired, and on their return reported, through Judge Owsley, the following, which were unanimously adopted:

President Garfield is dead. In the vigor of ripe manhood, in the full glory of his highest activities he has fallen by the hand of the assassin.

The people of Lincoln county, Ky., unite with the people of the whole country in the universal outpouring of grief which the event has occasioned. The sudden death of the Chief Magistrate, at any time a public calamity, is doubly so when, as in this instance, he is a noble illustration of the virtues that his people loved. The sick-bod of the President has, in truth, been a revelation to all of us. In its sublime fortitude, in its pathetic patience, in its unselfishness, in its devotion to the whole world, it has been a revelation to all of us. In its sublime fortitude, in its pathetic patience, in its unselfishness, in its devotion to the whole world, it has been a revelation to all of us.

The resolutions were ordered to be published in THE INTERIOR JOURNAL, Courier-Journal, Danville papers and Louisville Commercial. One or two short speeches were made, and on motion the meeting adjourned. THOS. W. VARMON, Chmn. A. A. WARREN, Secretary.
